When does the future start? The next giant leap forward may just happen as a result of a Malthusian crisis. This is a tale of the journey to the place where the next renaissance begins.

Dan Vogel is a software engineering architect in the Silicon Valley designing and building high tech devices at the leading edge for the giants in the industry. He has been on teams that created devices that virtually everyone over the age of 5 has used but he has started to tire of making products that have a useful life of 2 years before they are obsolete and discarded.

What started out as this seasons annual flu has become something much worse. People have been going home sick then they just don't seem to be returning to school and work. As things start to break down with everyone sick basic services start to be affected. When the power goes out Dan is certain that the end is near. As food starts to run low and people including parents start to die leaving orphaned children that have to leave home to look for support and protection from friendly neighbors. Dan gets adopted by a couple of teens that realize he is equipped to ride through the coming breakdown in society as food and water supplies become critical.

Dan doesn't disappoint when he takes Joe DiPicollo for a recon flight in a friends Pitts Special airplane. Dan realizes that flying out in a small passenger plane is the easiest way to get out over all the stalled and abandoned cars on all the roads out of the city. Dan, Joe and Jen prepare to leave not realizing that what seems like a simple flight will become the biggest adventure of their lives.
